

THROUGH THE BIBLE STUDY

1 CORINTHIANS 8-9

Diners, Drive-ins, and Dives, 30 Minute Meals by Rachael Ray, Cupcake Wars, Beat Bobby Flay - these are shows on the Food Network. This year the cable channel was seen in 100 million American homes.

Imagine, a single television channel devoted to food and cooking - it just proves what an impact food has on our daily lives... And the same was true in Corinth.

In fact, issues involving food had crept into the Corinthians' worship. A major debate had erupted in the church. It was a beef over beef! I have no doubt if there had been a Food Network at the time, this controversy would've become primetime programming.

"Tailgate Warriors" would've aired live from Corinth. A messy food fight had started in the church, and the Apostle Paul steps in to make sure it gets... chopped!

Chapter 8 begins, "Now concerning things offered to idols..." Recall, at this point in 1 Corinthians we're listening to one side of a two-sided conversation. Paul is answering questions asked in a previous letter. And one of the questions involved meat sacrificed to idols.

In the ancient world there were two places to purchase ground round... You could go to the market and pay premium prices, or you could buy beef from the pagan temples. When an animal was sacrificed to an idol the priests ate a portion; then the leftover cuts were sold to raise revenues for the temple. Some of the Corinthian Christians purchased the bargain beef.

The Corinthians weren't idolaters, they were just shrewd shoppers, coupon clippers. They hated paganism and what went with it - they just liked getting their hamburger on the cheap... But was this right?

How can a Christian eat meat he or she knows was sacrificed to an idol? The idea of guilt-by-association had been firmly etched in their minds. If it was in the devil's freezer, how can you put it on the grill for God?

And this was not just an issue for the ancients. A recent headline appeared in our news feeds, "Has Your Thanksgiving Turkey Been Sacrificed to Idols?"

The author reported America's most popular turkey brand, Butterball, is now processing turkeys according to "halal" or Islamic standards. Eat a butterball and it may've been blessed in the name of "Allah."

So what if your were shopping for a Thanksgiving turkey and the best buy was a Butterball? Would it matter to you if it had received an Islamic blessing?

You're going to gather at your table, and eat meat to the glory of Jesus. The money you save will even be donated to your church! Is it ok to buy the Butterball, or will this purchase make you a turkey in God's eyes?

This very issue had divided the church in Corinth. Some said “yes,” others said “no,” but everyone was adamant, “they were right.” More revealing than the debate, was the haughtiness and arrogance it showed.

Paul will deal with their beef, but first he addresses their pride: “We know that we all have knowledge. Knowledge puffs up, but love edifies. And if anyone thinks that he knows anything, he knows nothing yet as he ought to know.” Knowledge puffs up, love builds up.

It’s interesting though, there was knowledge on both sides of this issue. Folks on the “don’t do it side” understood the dangers of idolatry. Demonic forces were behind the worship of false gods... Whereas, folks on the “go to it side” knew that idols were nothing but sticks of wood. False gods don't exist, and meat sacrificed on their altars, is just that, a piece of meat.

The “don’t do its” and the “go to its” each had valid points. The problem was that both groups failed to recognize the legitimacy of each other’s concerns. They thought, “I’m right and you’re wrong.” Their knowledge had gone to their heads, not to their hearts.

The football helmet my son use to wear contained a rubber bladder you inflated with air. There was a nozzle on top where you inserted the needle. I’m afraid most of us have a similar nozzle imbedded in our scalp. We learn a little truth and it goes to our heads.

We’re right and everybody else becomes wrong. In Chapter 5 Paul used “leaven” or yeast, as a type of sin. Why? It “corrupts by puffing up.” Sin is the result of pride. The most dangerous person in the church is the guy who knows just enough to think he knows it all! Be leery of the self-proclaimed expert who feels it his duty to roam the church halls and police the saints. I love the quote, “Some people drink at the fountain of knowledge, others just gargle.” Beware of the garglers.

Paul says to both camps in Corinth, let some air out of your head, and pump some love into your heart.

The Corinthians had big-heads, but small-hearts. It’s been said, “Love without truth is hypocrisy, but truth without love is brutality.” We won’t always agree on every issue, but we can always show each other love.

Paul concludes in verse 3, “But if anyone loves God, this one is known by Him.” The key to knowing God is the heart, not the head. Blaise Pascal once wrote, “Man's wisdom must be understood to be loved, but God's wisdom must be loved to be understood.”

Head knowledge has a place. God’s truth is vital to our faith. But academic knowledge alone is not enough to save us. Real saving faith is a heart-felt faith.

He dives into the topic in verse 4, “Therefore concerning the eating of things offered to idols, we know that an idol is nothing in the world, and that there is no other God but one.” There's only one God. Idols are powerless. An idol is just a chunk of wood or stone.

“For even if there are so-called gods, whether in heaven or on earth (as there are many gods and many lords), yet for us there is one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we for Him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and through whom we live.” Other deities don't exist, yet even if they did as men proclaim, our Father God and the Lord Jesus Christ would reign supreme. The Father created all things. Jesus sustains all things. If pagan gods did exist, they would bow and obey the Christian God.

“However, there is not in everyone that knowledge; for some, with consciousness of the idol, until now eat it as a thing offered to an idol; and their conscience, being weak, is defiled.” Some people are effected by superstition. They believe in what isn't so. And thus, they might be tempted to placate a superstition, or bow to a false belief. They might ask, “do we really want to eat a slice of devil's food cake?”

Paul says don't worry. Your diet and the devil are not connected. Foods don't make us holy. Paul writes, “But food does not commend us to God; for neither if we eat are we the better, nor if we do not eat are we the worse.” We're right with God through faith not food. A right relationship with God is won through the work of Christ, not our own efforts. Eat or don't eat... our diet makes no difference in our standing before God.

Realize, just because Satan uses an object at some point - like meat sacrificed to an idol - doesn't mean the object is now intrinsically evil... Satan inspires songs that promote evil and lead people astray. But the chords and instruments that make up the music, are the same chords and instruments used to praise God.

An “A Chord” is a-moral in and of itself. A piece of meat is just meat, and a chord is just music. It ends up good or evil depending on the motive behind its use.

The same is true with dancing, or fashion, or alcohol, or gambling - or a thousand other issues that cause controversy among Christians. Some issues aren't right or wrong, black or white - they're gray matters!

In 1928 Donald Barnhouse spoke at a Bible conference attended by 200 young people, and some prudish counselors. One afternoon an older woman approached Barnhouse about an “appalling, sinful, wicked” practice going on among the girls at the camp.

You won't believe this, but they were walking around the camp in front of the boys with no stockings. These petty old ladies wanted the good preacher to rebuke this supposed “spirit of compromise” in the church.

Dr. Barnhouse writes about the incident, “Looking them straight in the eye, I said, 'The Virgin Mary never wore stockings.' They gasped and said, 'She didn't?' I answered, 'In Mary's time, stockings were unknown. So far as we know, they were first worn by prostitutes in Italy in the 15th century...” His answer immediately stifled the protest, and made them rethink the issue.

A Christian from America may take offense when his German brother drinks a beer. While the German may be appalled when an American sister wears a two-piece swimsuit on the beach. I've known Christians who'd never feel right about wearing shorts to church, but don't mind lighting up a cigarette after the service.

Like meat sacrificed to idols, cultural taboos are a moving target. They change from place to place, and from tribe to tribe, and from generation to generation.

Remember meat is nothing but meat. It's the attitude behind the use of it that varies from conscience to conscience. My conscience is not your master - nor is your conscience mine. Jesus is the only Master, and we all should follow His Spirit in these gray matters.

I love what Mark Twain once said, "The trouble with the world is not that people know too little, but they know so many things that ain't so." And this applies to church. Too many church-folk have been trained by superstition, or prejudice, or legend, or legalism. People-imposed rules govern their conscience.

Rather than love God and love people... and be led by the Holy Spirit... and do what glorifies God... it's often easier for Christians to just follow orders.

Paul doesn't encourage the Corinthians to violate their conscience. He wants them to retrain their conscience, so that it's no longer governed by tradition, but by truth. He wants them led by love not law.

Verse 9, "But beware lest somehow this liberty of yours become a stumbling block to those who are weak. For if anyone sees you who have knowledge eating in an idol's temple, will not the conscience of him who is weak be emboldened to eat those things offered to idols? And because of your knowledge shall the weak brother perish, for whom Christ died?"

Remember verse 1, "Knowledge puffs up, but love edifies..." Logically, you might know that meat is just meat. But a younger Christian, with weaker faith - sees meat as a moral issue. To eat it is to compromise. Thus, logic allows us to eat, but love requires restraint!

If we insist on our liberty knowing it'll lead a brother astray - what was right for us, has become a sin to him. You can become so right that you become wrong.

It might be fine for you to drink a glass of wine, or go out dancing, or listen to certain types of secular music... You've grown in Christ. You've gained some discernment and self-control. But what you're doing might lead a weaker believer down the wrong path. It's a sin for you to take that risk. If what you do could harm a brother; love says "Don't do it!" More important than us making our point is us caring for our brother.

Paul reiterates this in verse 12, "But when you thus sin against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience, you sin against Christ. Therefore, if food makes my brother stumble, I will never again eat meat, lest I make my brother stumble." And notice, the extent to which love takes Paul. He'll never again eat meat...

Imagine, juicy steak, spiced sausage, barbecue beef brisket, a delicious rack of ribs... Paul is prepared to give it all up for the faith of another believer. Do you really want to stumble a person for whom Christ died? To sin against a weaker brother is to sin against Christ!

Chapter 9 continues this discussion about Christian liberty, but on another topic. Paul points to how he curtailed his freedom as an apostle - gave up his perks and privileges - to keep the Corinthians from stumbling.

He begins, “Am I not an apostle? Am I not free? Have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord?” Here, and in Acts 1:21, we learn that one of the requirements for being an apostle was to be an eye-witness of the risen Christ. Paul had met Jesus on the Road to Damascus!

He continues, “Are you not my work in the Lord? If I am not an apostle to others, yet doubtless I am to you. For you are the seal of my apostleship in the Lord.”

The Corinthian church was also evidence of Paul’s apostleship. A thriving church had been born in an evil city. It was proof God’s hand was on Paul’s ministry.

Verse 3, “My defense to those who examine me is this: Do we have no right to eat and drink? Do we have no right to take along a believing wife, as do also the other apostles, the brothers of the Lord, and Cephas?”

One apostolic perk was food and lodging from the host church - even certain travel benefits. An apostle could travel with his wife. This was how “Cephas” or Peter rolled. And Paul could’ve demanded similar treatment. It was his apostolic right. Instead he refused to take advantage of his rights. He chose to travel light.

And here in verse 3 is a huge problem for Roman Catholics, who believe Peter was the first pope. If he was; then you’ve got a married pope. Pete had a wife.

Which reminds me of the newspaper tycoon who had three sons. He wanted to select one son to be his successor, but he wasn't sure which son would make the best newspaper man, so he proposed a test.

He asked each boy to come up with the most shocking, sensational three word headline possible.

The first son composed his headline, "Biden Turns Republican." That was sensational, but the second son bested him. His read, "Ayatollah Becomes Jewish." Yet it was the third son who won the prize. His headline had just two words, "Pope Elopes." That’s over the top!

Paul's point is that as an apostle he had certain rights he willingly forfeited. Other apostles were married and traveled with their wife. Paul stayed single.

He writes in verse 6, “Or is it only Barnabas and I who have no right to refrain from working?”

Here’s another right Paul forfeited due to his love for the Corinthians. From the earliest days, the Church supported its leaders financially, so they could devote themselves to full-time ministry. Paul was entitled to such support, but in Corinth he waived the privilege.

Acts 18:3 tells us while there, he lodged with Aquila and Priscilla, and helped make ends meet by working with them in their tent-making business. His intent was not to be a financial burden on the Corinthians. But now he questions the wisdom of his own strategy...

Verse 7, “Who ever goes to war at his own expense? Who plants a vineyard and does not eat of its fruit? Or who tends a flock and does not drink of the milk of the flock?” Paul’s strategy to work a secular job to support himself financially had not been optimal ministry-wise.

He mentions a soldier, a vinedresser, a farmer.

Soldiers should be supported by the people they help to defend. If a soldier in battle is worried about his family back home - whether they're starving, or getting evicted - how can he stay focused on the fight? A distracted soldier is a defeated soldier. He’s better on the battlefront, if he’s not worried about the home front.

And Paul’s point is the same for a pastor. How can he give himself fully to the study of God’s Word, and prayer for God’s people, if his own needs aren’t met.

Paul also says, you won’t find a thirsty vinedresser, or a dairy farmer with brittle bones. The vinedresser is drinking from his vineyard, and the farmer is drinking milk from his own cows. Likewise, a pastor should be supported from the finances taken by his own ministry.

No pastor should draw an exorbitant salary. But neither should a faithful pastor make the minimum.

Many churches pray, “Lord, you keep him humble, and we’ll keep him poor.” A church with that attitude may just get what they pay for! Paul is rebuking the Corinthians. They need to pony up and pay the pastor.

Verse 8, “Do I say these things as a mere man? Or does not the law say the same also? For it is written in the law of Moses...” Paul quotes Deuteronomy 25:4 - a verse you initially wouldn’t associate with paying the pastor. Apparently, the Spirit’s application of Scripture can be quite broad. Here’s Deuteronomy 25:4, “You shall not muzzle an ox while it treads out the grain.”

A good farmer allows his ox to munch the grain as he threshes. A weak ox is worthless! Paul says just as feeding the ox is an expense of the harvest, supporting the pastor is an expense of the spiritual harvest.

Paul concludes his commentary on Deuteronomy, “Is it oxen God is concerned about? Or does He say it altogether for our sakes? For our sakes, no doubt, this is written, that he who plows should plow in hope, and he who threshes in hope should be partaker of his hope.” It’s every worker’s hope to get paid a wage commiserate with his contribution. The same is true for a pastor... Years ago we had a fellow who suggested capping my salary. I resisted. Not because I wanted a lot of money, but because I knew I needed a lot of hope. Why kill a man's incentive to work hard?

I told the elders at the time, “Please, raise my salary, or lower my salary, but don't ever put me in a situation where there's nothing I can do about my salary.” That produces a hopeless worker and pastor. Paul understood men, and pastors - and what motivates both. He says, “he who plows should plow in hope.”

Verse 11, “If we have sown spiritual things for you, is it a great thing if we reap your material things?” Here's a spiritual principle vital to church life. If a pastor helps you grow in your faith; then support him materially. If a church adds to your spiritual life; then it's a small trade-off for you to help that church pay a few of its bills.

And if this applies to all pastors, it certainly applied to Paul's dealings with the Corinthians. “If others are partakers of this right over you, are we not even more?

“Nevertheless we have not used this right, but endure all things lest we hinder the gospel of Christ.” Paul had founded the church at Corinth. He was the pastor most entitled to a salary. But he had laid aside his rights, lest someone accuse him of selfish motives.

Understand, Paul was not above accepting a church's financial help. On other occasions he gladly received such support, just not in Corinth. Perhaps, the Corinthians were suspicious of crooked clergy. Maybe they'd been burned by another pastor. Paul wanted to say to them he cared about their soul, not their money.

And this is how CalvaryCSM has patterned our approach to money. Sure, we have needs. Don't think the power company donates electricity to the church... Last year we paid Walton EMC a whopping 20 grand.

I think we would be well within our God-ordained right to be bolder in our comments about giving, but for 42 years we've waived those rights. I realized how often churches have abused appeals for money. Folks have been manipulated. Thus, for the sake of the Gospel, we're a church that limits our fund-raising.

CC exists to meet your needs, not the other way around. We've always believed God will take care of His church if we're faithful to the ministry He's given us.

Verse 13, “Do you not know that those who minister the holy things eat of the things of the temple, and those who serve at the altar partake of the offerings of the altar?” When an OT worshipper brought his animal to the altar, the priest who administered the sacrifice got a choice cut of meat. He was paid in beef. The OT priest was supported by the worshippers.

“Even so the Lord has commanded that those who preach the gospel should live from the gospel.” So, what was true of the OT priests is also be true of NT pastors. Pastors should be paid from the monetary sacrifices offered by the people to God and His work.

I once attended a church that on every 2nd and 4th Sundays the offering was given to the pastor. He preached his best sermons those Sundays. Of course, if you got mad at him, you gave on the 1st or 3rd. I'm not sure that's a wise method, but at least the church was biblical in paying the pastor from the offerings.

Verse 15, "But I have used none of these things, nor have I written these things that it should be done so to me; for it would be better for me to die than that anyone should make my boasting void." Paul would rather have died than be portrayed as a money-hungry.

It reminds me of Evangelist Billy Graham. Early in his ministry, after his crusade in Atlanta, a newspaper ran a photo of Billy leaving the stadium with bags of money. He was innocent of any wrong doing, but it was certainly bad optics. And from that day onward Billy always tried to separate himself from the money.

Graham adopted a modest salary, and set up strict guidelines for how others should handle the ministry's finances. He wanted everything to not just be above board, but appear above board. He eliminated any appearance of impropriety. This should be our attitude!

Paul says in verse 16, "For if I preach the gospel, I have nothing to boast of, for necessity is laid upon me; yes, woe is me if I do not preach the gospel!" I tell young men who come to me wanting to be pastors, "If you can do anything else in the world other than be a pastor, and be happy doing it; then don't be a pastor."

Being a pastor isn't just a career move. It should be the passion of a man's heart. It's a calling from God.

Paul had no choice in the matter. Being a pastor was laid on Paul of necessity. Woe to him if he didn't preach the Gospel. Paul would've been successful at whatever he did - but satisfied? I doubt it! God called Paul to preach, and he would be happy doing nothing else.

"For if I do this willingly, I have a reward; but if against my will, I have been entrusted with a stewardship. What is my reward then? That when I preach the gospel, I may present the gospel of Christ without charge, that I may not abuse my authority in the gospel." Paul's ministry was a stewardship - a divine responsibility - laid upon Him by God. And his reward was not charging folks a dime for that ministry. Paul had never abused his authority.

This too is our reward. CalvaryCSM can say that in 42 years we've never pressured God's people to give. We've never even passed the plate. We've trusted God to provide our needs, and He's always been faithful.

I once had a man tell me he knew why we were able to operate without pressing people for money. He said, "You must have one big donor floating your ministry." I told him he was right, and His name is Jesus Christ!

Once, I was watching a television special on the first 50 years of the NBA. One of the Old-timers said, "The team owners were the dumbest people on earth. They paid us a salary, but they didn't have to - we would've played for free." They played for the love of the game.

And this is how I feel about being your pastor. Don't misunderstand, I appreciate my salary - you are biblical for paying me - but "If you guys didn't pay me to pastor this church, I'd pay you for the opportunity." "Pastor" is the most demanding, taxing, challenging, intense job I know. But I wouldn't trade being one for any other post in the world. I thank God daily for the opportunity to communicate His Word and to pastor His people.

Verse 19, "For though I am free from all men, I have made myself a servant to all, that I might win the more..." Paul's freedom in Christ was far-reaching - he was free from the Law, free to eat meat, free from money. And he was also free from the opinions of men.

Paul didn't care one iota about what people thought of him. His only desire was the Lord's approval! And he cared about what people thought of Jesus, and the Gospel. He was an ambassador for Christ. This is why he was so diligent to build bridges to different peoples.

He elaborates on his strategy in verse 20, "and to the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might win Jews; to those who are under the law, as under the law, that I might win those who are under the law; to those who are without law, as without law (not being without law toward God, but under law toward Christ), that I might win those who are without law; to the weak I became as weak, that I might win the weak. I have become all things to all men, that I might by all means save some. Now this I do for the gospel's sake, that I may be partaker of it with you." Paul was faithful and flexible.

If his audience were Jews he would observe Jewish customs. He ate kosher food, and kept the Sabbath. It wasn't the time or place to flaunt his freedom. Why try to prove a point, and loose a soul who needs Jesus? But when Paul spoke to Gentiles he downplayed his Jewishness, and extolled his freedoms. Paul knew if he could fit in, he would be better positioned to speak up.

Obviously, we're not talking about compromising moral, or ethical, or spiritual, or biblical values. Paul was pointing out that he adapted to the culture at hand.

Most likely, the biker will win the biker to Jesus - the salesman will win the salesman - the housewife will win the housewife. Paul identified with the person or persons he wanted to reach. He understood their culture, and found common ground to build a bridge.

Yet few Christians today think like Paul. Our polarized world conditions us to look for the differences between us, rather than the similarities. Race? Politics? We run down the checklist. When in reality our similarities are probably more numerous - we both have a car, a mortgage, kids, a job, etc., etc. Paul is saying focus on the similarities. Build a rapport. Win the person's trust and respect; then share the Gospel.

Evangelism expert, Donald McGraven, once said, "The world has more winnable people than ever before... but it's possible to come out of a ripe field empty-handed." That's happening today. The world is hungry for the Gospel, but the Church doesn't get close enough to folks to present it in a compelling way.

When Hudson Taylor, landed on mainland China he struggled in his efforts to spread the Gospel. One day the Lord told him to give up his Western clothes and customs, and dress like the Chinese - even cut his hair.

This offended his fellow western missionaries, but it built a bridge to the locals that yielded a great spiritual harvest... He didn't go to China to reach missionaries!

The founder of the Salvation Army, William Booth, once said, "I would stand on my head, and play a tambourine with my feet if I thought it would help me win one lost soul to Jesus." That's how I feel. I'll try anything - other than sin - if it'll help me reach a person or peoples for Jesus. I'd even get a tattoo... maybe!

Chapter 9 ends with a trip to the stadium. Corinth was the site of the Isthmian Games. At the time the competition in Corinth eclipsed the Olympics in Athens. The Greek peninsula was a hotbed for athletics.

And Paul was a sports buff. He had tickets. He loved to watch the games. And in verse 24 he compares the Christian life to an athletic contest. "Do you not know that those who run in a race all run, but one receives the prize? Run in such a way that you may obtain it."

Over fifty years ago, US Olympic coach, Brutus Hamilton, compiled a list of what he thought would be the ultimate achievements in track-and-field. He listed what he thought were the limits of human endeavor.

No one would ever run a 9.2 second 100 yard dash, or a 3 minute 57 second mile, or throw a shot put more than 62 feet, or high jump more than 7'1", or long jump 27 feet, or pole vault more than 16 feet. Today, everyone of these barriers have been shattered.

And spiritually speaking, you too can go higher, last longer, be stronger than you once thought possible. All that holds you back is a lack of faith. Paul tells the Corinthian Christians to get serious. Be determined. Don't give up the first time you get knocked down.

The all-time NFL rushing leader is Dallas Cowboy's halfback, Emmitt Smith. Over his career Emmitt rushed 18,355 yards. But do you know that Emmitt was knocked down every 4.2 yards? He had to get back up 4,409 times. A man's total yardage doesn't come easy. In fact, nothing of any real, lasting value comes easy. If you want to rack up some yards for Jesus, and score a few touchdowns, your faith needs to toughen up.

Verse 25, "And everyone who competes for the prize is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a perishable crown, but we for an imperishable crown."

When an athlete is training for an event, there are foods he won't eat, and activities in which he won't participate. A training regiment requires discipline.

The Greek athlete exerted all this effort for a flimsy wreath. Whereas, a Christian is after eternal rewards. How much more determined should we be?

“Therefore I run thus: not with uncertainty. Thus I fight: not as one who beats the air. But I discipline my body and bring it into subjection, lest, when I have preached to others, I myself should become disqualified.” The phrase translated “discipline my body,” literally reads, “I blacken my eye.” Paul uses severe measures in his training. He pushes his body.

He does whatever it takes to make his body do what it doesn't want to do. And every child of God needs this kind of mindset... For a Christian, God's Spirit has put it in our hearts to obey. As Jesus said, “The Spirit is willing...” Our problem is the body - “our flesh is weak.”

Thus, we need the discipline to push ourselves and get our bodies aligned with our true desires. Jesus transforms our heart, but it's our job to train our bodies.

For Paul worries that he could disqualify himself from serving God. As he puts it, “that after I have preached to others, I myself should become disqualified.” He imagines a scenario where his soul is saved, yet his life is wasted. Christians can be rendered unusable.

The swimmer has to stay in his lane. The boxer can't throw a low blow. The runner can't leave before the gun sounds. To win you have to play by the rules.

And likewise, to be useful in the Kingdom you've got to serve God, His way. God doesn't reward short-cuts, or wildcat operations separate from His Spirit and will.

All our performance-enhancing schemes, and tactics, and gimmicks won't take the place of faithful obedience. Do God's work, God's way and you'll never regret it - you'll receive an imperishable, eternal crown.
